Lost in the Storm

Taunting off to town to run a few errands on a cloudy Ipswich evening, 18½" Evangeline Ghastly looks at the sky with her gleaming violet inset eyes peeking out behind lush lashes. A storm is coming, she thinks. I had better hurry. As Evangeline leaves the fruit stand, she feels a juicy raindrop land on her rooted, sleek brown tresses. Just then, the wind picks up and is blowing gleefully through her dress of mauve purple and black - she sure is glad she wore her fur-trimmed taffeta shawl!

With a deafening crack, the thunder and lightning begin in harmony with the now howling wind. Evangeline doesn't know this part of town well, but she needs to find cover, somewhere to wait out the storm. With a zig here and a zag there, finally she happens upon a candle shop she had never been to before and she darts inside, and just in time. For here comes the storm!

Midnight Lace & Roses

Evangeline's blue inset eyes squint a tad behind her thick lashes as she threads the needle on her sewing machine, and she blows her wiggled mink bangs out of her eyes as she tosses her thick mane over her shoulder. She's just putting the last finishing touches on her latest frock of black lace adorned with roses, and after one more zip through her sewing machine, she holds it up and gazes thoughtfully. Ready to try on, she thinks.

She slides the black lace and net dress over her hips and arranges the transparent ruffled skirt so it drapes just so from her ankles to the floor. For the finishing touch, Evangeline pairs her gown with a flower and ribbon embellished capelet of tulle rosettes and black fishnet gauntlets. With black stockings, beaded earrings and black strappy heels, this gown will be perfect for stargazing in the cemetery. LE 200
